Abstract: On June 30, 1998, the Presidio Trust (Trust) adopted final interim regulations establishing basic requirements for the management of the area administered by the Trust. Since their adoption in June 1998, the final interim regulations served the public well and provided clear, concise guidance to those charged with enforcing the Trust's regulations. The final interim regulations had worked well since the Trust began administering a portion of the Presidio on July 1, 1998, and the Trust elected not to change a system of rules that has proven to be generally effective and workable. The Trust has adopted final interim regulations as final regulations for management of the area under its administrative jurisdiction. These regulations cover public use and recreational activities; the protection of natural, cultural, and archeological resources; vehicle and traffic safety; and commercial and private operations.
